Fran is reveling in an artist's paradise. Her journey of experimentation in clay art recommenced a few years ago, and she has never looked back. A born creator, Fran has made quilts, stained glass windows, furniture and fibre arts, among many other things. She discovered clay art in high school, but took a break and became a doting mother. Her zest for creation never dimmed however, and she successfully completed a BA in visual arts and a teaching certificate as well.

Five years ago, clay art's intrigue triggered her interest and Fran returned to potting. "I have always considered myself to be a production potter and I love the quick response of the clay on the wheel. I have also begun making a wide range of experimental items. In recent times, I have been working with hand-built pieces pushing both my, as well as the material's limits, to develop creative sculptures." Driven by the process and understandably pleased with the results, Fran is showing no sign of slowing down anytime soon.
